The requirements for a supplementary major in French and Francophone Studies: Language and Literature track include demonstrated competency in the language and successful completion of 24 credit hours or 8 courses at or above ROFR 20202. At least half of the major courses must be taken in residence at Notre Dame. Of the 8 required courses, no more than 3 may be at the 20000 level (i.e. 20202-29999), one of which must be ROFR 206XX or above, and 6 must be in literature/culture studies.

The following courses are required of all supplementary majors: ROFR 30310, 30710, and 30720. ROFR 30310 (The Art of Interpretation) should be taken before ROFR 30710-30720 (overviews of literature and culture) and should be completed by the end of junior year. Although it is expected that these required courses be taken in residence at Notre Dame, equivalent courses from international study programs or other universities may be substituted for ROFR 30310, 30710, and/or 30720, as explained in the Undergraduate Bulletin. Any other substitution will require the approval of the Undergraduate Coordinator in French. One elective course may be taken in English. AP credits satisfy the language requirement only and may not be applied to the major.
