The requirements for a first major in French and Francophone Studies include demonstrated competency in the language and successful completion of 30 credit hours or 10 courses above ROFR 20215. At least half of the major courses must be taken in residence at Notre Dame. Of the 10 required courses, no more than 3 may be at the 20000 level (20300 and above) and 6 must be in literature/culture studies. Of these 6, a minimum of 2 must be at the 40000 level and one must be the Senior Seminar (ROFR 53000).

The following courses are required of all first majors: ROFR 30310, 30710, 30720, and 53000. ROFR 30310 (Textual Analysis) should be taken before ROFR 30710-30720 (literary surveys) and should be completed by the end of junior year. Although it is expected that these required courses be taken in residence at Notre Dame, equivalent courses from international study programs or other universities may be substituted for ROFR 30310, 30710, and/or 30720, as explained in the Undergraduate Bulletin. Any other substitution will require the approval of the Undergraduate Coordinator in French. One elective course may be taken in English. AP credits satisfy the language requirement only and may not be applied to the major.
